Truthful, Fair, Friendly, and Beneficial to Others

Even though my sister is three years younger than me, I look up to her. She is kind and understanding to everyone, especially me. It's amazing how truthful, fair, friendly, and helpful she is.

Truthfulness is a very important trait to have. If you always tell the truth, people will trust you much more than if you do only sometimes or never.

Your parents will let you be more independent. My sister is truthful every day. She tells the truth even when it doesn't benefit her. She is truthful to my parents. She tells them if she got a bad grade in school or if she watched TV while she was supposed to be doing chores. My sister is truthful to me. She tells me if she broke something of mine or got paint on my good jeans. If you tell the truth about something bad that you've done, you won't get in as much trouble as if you lie about it. The person you lie to will always find out.

Fairness can help you out in many tough situations. When you are fair, you are unbiased and just. My sister is fair when she is playing with my brother and me. If my sister wants to watch one TV show and I want to watch another, she will compromise. We either find something we both like or switch back and forth between shows. When she plays Littlest Pet Shop with my brother they both usually want the big house. My sister suggests that one of them get the big house and the other get all the little houses. My sister is fair in all she does.

Friendship means a lot. If you have friends you will be much happier than if you are by yourself. There are different kinds of friends. My sister and I are true friends. She sticks with me through everything. We do a lot of fun things together. We play soccer, we practice martial arts, I help her practice for plays, sometimes we just sit down together and read. I couldn't ask for a better friend.

My sister is also helpful. When you're helpful you know what people need or want done and you do it. My sister is the most helpful person I know. Whenever anyone needs anything she will go and do it. She helps my mom by feeding the dogs, doing the dishes, and straightening up around the house. She helps me by helping me get my soccer-stuff ready and vacuuming my room. She helps with everything.

My sister shows these traits all the time. She does it through her words and her actions. I try to be more like her every day. I am so happy to have a sister who is so truthful, fair, friendly, and helpful. I'd never want a better sister.
